An invoice is 30 days late. Three chasers, each one firmer.

Type this into ChatGPT, Copilot or Gemini

> I run a plumbing firm. A customer is [30] days late paying invoice [number] for [£amount]. Write three short emails: a friendly nudge today, a firmer one in 7 days, a final one in 14 days saying what happens next. Leave a gap marked CHECK for anything about interest or legal action. Polite, plain, under 90 words each.

Then attach Nothing. Fill in the brackets and leave the customer's name out.

What comes back: three emails, and one line left for you.

When	Subject line	The line that matters
Today	Invoice 2291: a quick reminder	Just checking this didn't get lost. Could you let us know when it'll be paid?
Day 7	Invoice 2291: now 37 days overdue	Please pay by this Friday, or ring us if there's a problem with the work.
Day 14	Invoice 2291: final reminder	CHECK: say what happens next, such as interest or passing it on. Your call.

Illustrative example. The CHECK is deliberate: the next step is a decision for you, not the AI.
