Site notes to a written quote, in about 10 minutes

For builders and trades. Your own prices stay yours. A quote ready to send.

Type your notes in, exactly as they are

> “Here are my site notes for a job. Turn them into a written quote with a line for each item of work. Leave the prices blank. Write CHECK where my notes don’t say. Plain English, no jargon.”

Put your own prices in yourself

Fill the blank lines from your own price list. Never ask it to guess a price, and never paste your price list in.

Ask for the bits you always forget

“Add a line for access, parking, waste removal, and how long the price holds for. Say which of these my notes don’t cover.”

Take the customer's details out first

Leave out names, addresses, phone numbers and anything about the customer. The job and the measurements are all it needs.

Read it back before it goes

Check every measurement, price and date against your own notes. The quote is yours, and so is anything wrong in it.

The whole thing on one slide

Notes in. Quote out, prices blank. Your prices in. Ask for access, parking, waste and how long it holds. Names out. Read it back.

One of these a week.

Something you can use before Friday.

25 more prompts, free:
aiforcompanies.co.uk/prompts
This is not legal advice.
Save for your next quote