Prices go up next month. A note customers won’t mind.

Type this into ChatGPT, Copilot or Gemini

> I run a [cafe] with [nine] staff. Our prices go up by [4%] on [1 December]. Write a short note to regular customers: what’s changing, when, and why, in one line. Don’t apologise twice and don’t blame anyone. If you can’t tell from this, write CHECK. Under 120 words. Warm and plain.

Then attach nothing. Just fill in the brackets, then send it.

What comes back: six lines, and two left for you.

The note, line by line	Why it's there
From 1 December our prices go up by about 4%.	Says it first, no build-up
Most drinks go up by 10p. A few stay the same.	Gives it in money, not percent
Our beans, milk and wages have all gone up.	One plain reason, nobody blamed
It's the first change we've made in over a year.	Check it's true
Loyalty cards you've already bought still work.	Your rule
Thank you for sticking with us.	Ends warm, doesn't grovel

Illustrative example. Say the money, not the percentage. The two green lines are yours.