

FOR UK FIRMS

What to say when a client asks if you used AI

Four facts, agreed once, so that everybody in the firm gives the same answer.

- Swipe. Save it for Monday.

FIRST

Answer the question underneath

- ✓ Almost nobody means "did a machine write this"
- ✓ They mean: did our information leave your control
- ✓ And: is a named person accountable for what you sent
- ✓ Answer those two and the first stops mattering

SECOND

Have four facts ready

- ✓ Which tools the firm has approved
- ✓ Whether client information goes into them, and which
- ✓ Whether the supplier trains models on what you put in
- ✓ Who reviewed the work before it left the building

THIRD

Then say it plainly

- ✓ "We use assistants for drafting and research"
- ✓ "Your information is not pasted into consumer tools"
- ✓ "A named person reviews everything before it reaches you"
- ✓ "We can send you our policy. It is one page"

AND

Four ways to get it wrong

- ✓ Saying no when the answer is yes
- ✓ Promising a blanket ban you cannot enforce
- ✓ Improvising a different answer for each client
- ✓ Leaving it to whoever happens to pick up the phone

The answer is a document, not a mood.

The ICO is clear that the organisation stays responsible for what its AI does with personal information. Write the four facts down once.
